ABOUT COAD

The Ohio Center for Lead Abatement (OCLA) was created in 1994 as an offshoot of the Ohio Weatherization Training Center. Because most weatherization and rehab activities focus on housing built prior to 1978, it was logical to offer guidance on lead-safe work practices and lead abatement.

OCLA began as a training center for Lead Abatement Contractor Training, Lead Inspector and Risk Assessor Training. Originally, OCLA was a member of the EPA-sponsored lead training consortium with the University of Maryland. In 1995, the Ohio Department of Health (ODH) assumed authority for lead activities in the State of Ohio, and OCLA became one of the original certified lead training entities in Ohio.

As Lead-Safe Renovator and Lead-Safe Weatherization Trainings began, OCLA became the “official” training provider for the Ohio Department of Development weatherization and HUD-sponsored rehab programs. Additionally, OCLA trainers have become licensed lead risk assessors and have provided risk assessments and technical assistance to housing authorities throughout Ohio. In 2009, COAD/OCLA gained certification from the United States EPA to provide the RRP Initial and RRP Refresher Trainings.

COAD currently has 10 trainers approved by the Ohio Department of Health and EPA to provide lead training through OCLA.
